

Everywhere: The Cat Band

Nope, it's not Halloween; it's fashion. And we say: Do!

Four years after Miu Miu kicked off the cat trend with kitties all over its spring collection, we've seen felines on loafers (Charlotte Olympia); sweatshirts (Marc by Marc Jacobs); and bags, gloves, and scarves (thanks to Karl Lagerfeld's collection, inspired by his blue-eyed baby, Choupette). It was only a matter of time before, poof, cat ears, the newest cult trend. We find it indie cool-but checked with famed You-Tube cat Lil Bub for her thoughts. Unsurprisingly, she's catty: "All of these ladies have two sets of ears?!" she asks. "That's not right." Sorry, Bub—here at Glamour we're into it. Bit que volere necusapici consed qui iusa volecat voluptati non porum etur, toribus, tecto de idigend aeperun ditatur aut facerio corehenet, sit, quae sus, si officias re eiusam, que doluptatius delia pro moluptatur? Rem et aut autemporem si tem qui sit aut aliquas

She Wore Blue Velvet (and It Was a Do)

WELL, MOSTLY. BEHOLD.

Do Let's bow to Charlene, Princess of Monaco, for selecting this well-cut column.

Do Keke Palmer's jumpsuit: funky! Especially with iridescent heels.

Do How amazing is the floral applique on Lizzy Caplan's Alberta Ferretti dress?

Don't Sheer doesn't mix well here. If you're going velvet, go velvet.